A Message from Father Rick

A father wanted his son to grow up wise and learned so he sent him to a Monk to teach him the ways of life. Few days past and the son was surprised that his new teacher had not spoken a single word to him. After a week, the restless son thought of finally complaining. He said to the monk, "I was sent by my father here to learn from you, but after staying for a long time I haven't learned anything yet." The monk replied, "If you cannot admire my silence, you won't admire my words. If you don't learn first to appreciate silence, you wouldn't have the chance to learn at all." While it is important to go out and serve the Lord among the poor and the sick, it is also equally important to recharge oneself by spending moments of silence before God. The disciple did just that. They came back to Jesus after having been successful at what He instructed them to do. It is also in these moments of silence and with Jesus that we will find God's strength and guidance.
